Instructions: Audience Analysis

The intended audience for this document is the community of people who are either amateur or professional programmers. Amateur programmers need not necessarily have programming experience, know beforehand some programming concepts to read the instruction. There is a dedicated Before you start section that will help the reader with any level of programming understanding to learn some fundamentals required to perform the instructions. The targeted community of programmers may have a motive of enriching their Discord server, freelancing for other Discord server administrators, or simply learning for knowledge.

The intended audience also comprises the community of Discord users who would love their own brands and willingly expand their comfort zone by learning something new. It is necessary that the Discord users who read this instruction set have sufficient permissions in the Discord server they wish to develop the bot for. The minimum permissions requirement set for adding a bot to their server is either Administrator or Manager Servers and Manager Roles.